

*n*Logic Opens in Huntsville

*n*Logic, a company formed by a buyout of Huntsville-based Torch Systems, recently held a ribbon cutting to announce its opening. *n*Logic currently employs 32 people at its office in Cummings Research Park.

The transaction of Torch Systems to *n*Logic was facilitated through a management/employee-led buyout. Historically, Torch Technologies has provided services directly to government customers while Torch Systems, LLC was primarily focused on providing services to prime contractors.

Tim Thornton, who was previously the president of Torch Systems before the buyout, now leads *n*Logic. Thornton said that the company will maintain the same employee-owned atmosphere that Torch Systems had but with a different focus.

“We will focus on product development as opposed to consulting,” he said.

Thornton praised Torch Technologies for its high ethical standards and Torch CEO Bill Roark.

“Torch’s ethics are impeccable. The number of awards Torch has won over the past years is representative of the leadership of Bill Roark,” he said.

Torch Systems spins off *n*Logic through an employee buy-out adding to the growing list of small, successful business in the Huntsville/Madison County community.
